

I would like to express my support of XM Radio and it's content. My subscription to this service has been an incredible experience for both my personal use and professional use. I am in my car constantly due to work demands and rely in the 24-hour traffic, news and weather reports, not to mention the personal pleasure I enjoy with the wide variety of music. I am confused as to why our government would hinder such a great technology and asset. If normal FM / AM radio is loosing listners, maybe they should do as any other business or person and work at making their industry better. Don't run to the government and cry "no fair", it's very immature. Besides, I pay for XM, just like a pay for cable TV or pay Blockbuster to watch the movies I want to watch. Why isn't NBC, CBS or ABC complaining? Maybe they have made an effort to compete, the American Way...right?
